Turquoises are the favorite stones of all the Mongol races, and are generally orn in their original state, except by the Chinese women, who have them roughly cut, and wear them mixed with pearls and coral. Both the Tibetan men and women ornament themselves with lump turquoises, the men wearing them attached to their single gold earings, which are worn in the right ear only. The women of Ladakh carry their fortunes on their heads, in the shape of a broad strip of red cloth studded with huge turquoises, which, starting from the forehead, is carried over the head, and hangs nearly to the waist. These peraks, as they are called, sometimes cost as much as twenty pounds. By Ladakhis those turquoises are preferred that have little black specks on them, which show their genuineness; for even in the wilds of cen-tral Asia the spotless blue composition emanating from Europe is offered for sale, the bazaar at Darjeeling being flooded with it. The Bhutia women in the Darjeeling district wear quaint brass ornaments covdistrict wear quaint brass ornaments covered with chip turquoise, which are cheap; but the Mongolians have the embossed silver plates which form such a becoming headgear, studded with really fine turquoises, for which the owners have to give valuable furs in exchange.

THE LONG JUJU FOUND. African Tribes.

From the St. James' Gazette. The British expedition to Aro, back of the Guinea coast, reports that it has disthe Guinea coast, reports that it has disthe Guinea coast, reports that it has discovered the "long juju." The "long juju" is a fetich or object of worship, of which little is known beyond the fact that it is the fetich most dreaded by the West Afri- Behind Other Capitals in the Matter can tribes. The terrorism which the Aros have long exercised over the neighboring tribes has been due in great measure to their guardianship of the "long juju." Maj. West Africa," states that the supreme juju accounts given of the place," he says, "vary very considerably, though it appears cercide are referred. The threat of 'long juju' is held over his trading boys by the chief, and, it being the general opinion that there is no return for the person sent, the hold thus established is tolerably complete. "Still, cases occur of slaves whose mis-deeds have been repeatedly punished, and whom their master wishes to get rid of; the master assembles a court of the chiefs, and the offender is sentenced to be deported to 'long juju,' and he then proceeds on his journey, under the care of a juju man, who, the natives affirm, conducts him, blindfolded and by a circuitous route, to the fatal spot. What eventually takes place has never been divulged, and the popular accounts have probably been spread by the chiefs to overawe their slaves. The surreme indeed is set of the surreme indeed to set of the set of preme judge is said to be a priestess pos-sessed of the power of knowing all things. When brought before her the offender is merely told that he can depart; if guilty he becomes transfixed to the spot, and water gradually arises around him until he is submerged. Another version is that the place is situated on an island, and that the victim, on being handed over by his conductor, goes through some form of mock trial, always resulting in conviction, whereon he is cast alive into a huge tank of boiling human blood. Juju men stand around, armed with two-edged swords, with which they hack the body to pieces and stir up the contents of the tank.'

lotte of excellent memory, did not devote herself more conscientiously to the training of her children than has Queen Alexandra, but how different the methods, and how immeasurably different the result! Queen Charlotte did the nursery "spanking" with her own royal hands and saw her grown beys "whipped like dogs," to use the expression of a lady of the court, but it did not reform them. Queen Alexandra has proved that the power of love is more potent than the birch. She has ever been the chief companion of her children, sharing their recreations with an enjoyment and liveliness equal to their own; now riding races with her little girls in Sandringham Park, entering into the cricket matches played by the young princes with the village boys, spending long days on the moors with them in the shooting season, or whiling away a pleasant day fishing in the Dee. The queen's naturally gay and youthful spirit has kept its freshness in the companionship of her children, and in these later years of her grandchildren. She likes to have young life around her, and is very tolerant of the ways of the little ones. As her children dren grew up she was more strict with them, and only permitted the princesses to enter court life very gradually.

Few debutantes were as charmingly fresh as the queen's daughters at their first drawing room, and though the almost severe simplicity of their dress was, after their appearance in society, relaxed, they still continued to set an example of girlish simplicity and neatness. They can scarcely their appearance in society, relaxed, they still continued to set an example of girlish simplicity and neatness. They can scarcely be said to have worn jewels until after their marriage, and their reading the said to have their marriage. leir marriage, and their reading and amusements were under strict supervision. The habit of relying on their mother's taste and judgment has remained with Princess Louise and Princess Maud even since they have had homes of their own; and every opportunity of spending time with their parents is eagerly seized, while cess Victoria as the "home daughter" is very beautiful. Even the Prince of Wales has not broken away altogether from the old life, and his devotion to the princess and their beautiful children is linked to unremitting attention to his mother and sis-ters. At Sandringham they are seen enjoying country life all together much as of yore, and if the king chances to be absent fulfilling engagements, the prince is the queen's cavalier at church or any other public appearance. Over his swing bed on board the Ophir a portrait of his mother carrying Prince Edward pick-a-back was hung beside that of his wife, and above

LONDON'S BACKWARDNESS.

"The citizens. He is shocked to see scavenging carts collecting refuse from houses at ali hours of the day, and he wonders why tain that it is the court of final ordeal to such work is not required to be performed which all cases that the local juju men, for at an early hour in the morning. He does not understand why coal carts, heavy wagons, and similar traffic are allowed to crawl along main thoroughfares during business hours, instead of being compelled to proceed by side streets.

He is aghast, like everybody else, at the incessant blocking of traffic by the open-ing up of roadways, and asks why, when it is unavoidable, all such work is not prosecuted continuously, day and night, by relays until it is completed. He is aston-ished to find that he cannot obtain a postsage stamp in the largest of London railway stations, so that he has to go outside in search of a post office when he wants to post a letter in a hurry. He is disgusted at the condition of many of the post offices, where there are no proper conveniences for writing. He finds our milk and meat supplies—taking them all round—the worst in any civilized town, and he gives worst in any civilized town, and he gives from personal experience a horrible ex-ample of the facilities for sending diseased meat to market. He might easily have lengthened the list. We all know of these things, and most of us are continually groaning over one or other of them, but the recital may help to remind the more lethargic-minded how far we are as yet from being a truly progressive community notwithstanding a "megaomaniac" county council and a whole army of chained and robed minor municipal authorities.

From the Shangbai Mercury.

The allied nations, says the "Sin Wan Pao," ought now to restore Tientsin to its rightful owners. They came in order to restore order. Now that order is restored, why do they tarry? They insisted that we must pay heavy indemnities. We paid them, or promised to pay them, why do they then still keep their claws on our territory? The expenses of their soldiers are all included in the indemnities. We now have a man in Yuan Shikkai who is able to cope with any possible recrudescence of trouble. The allies need not pretend they are holding on for fear of fresh trouble. There is then really no excuse for them, if they are really sincere in their protestations that they came in the first instance solely for our good. The troubles have now ceased for a whole year. They cannot honestly say they retain Tientsin for the purpose of restoring order. We have actually given our bonds for the payment of the indemnities. Is not that the same as if we had paid them in hard cash? Why do they not clear out?
